“Initially, I was a player,” Donpraphop recalls. “But after joining several tournaments, I noticed that the matches were not very exciting without commentators. From watching international matches, I realized that the audience learned a lot about the sport and players’ background from the commentators. That’s when I became interested in becoming a commentator myself.”

According to him, commentators account for about 10 per cent of staff at e-sports firms and most earn between Bt15,000 and Bt30,000 a month. "Income can be higher if commentators take extra jobs at available events," Donraphop said. The more experienced you are, the higher you are paid. He says he constantly updates his skills and knowledge because the industry has been moving fast.

“The popularity of players have also changed over time. As professional commentators, we need to keep abreast of what has been going on in our field.” A skilled commentator could share interesting tidbits about the players, new scenes and rules.

“We bring excitement and leave our audience and players feeling happy,” Donpraphop said.
